

Bee Flight

President's Report

Welcome to our May Newsletter, I trust you all had the opportunity for a break over Easter. The Ipswich Show is fast approaching and I ask all members to consider giving a few hours to assist with the Club's activities. This is our most significant fundraising event for the year. The proceeds from the sale of honey and other products helps maintain the club's a good financial position in order to pay for our larger financial commitments such as insurance. We hope that you will spare a couple of hours to come & help setting up on Thursday night, manning the stall on Friday, Saturday, Sunday and again packing up on Monday morning.

I have noticed a few colder mornings over the past week so if you haven't already done so, its time to start thinking about overwintering your bees. A bee colony needs to maintain a constant brood temperature of 34°C. In winter, bees achieve this by generating heat with their body. Honey serves as food and pollen provides the proteins bees need in their diet. To survive periods of time without bringing in fresh nectar and pollen, bees rely on their stores of pollen and honey. Starvation can be a real threat to honeybees in winter particularly if you have had a tough season, There is a section on our website about overwintering bees, but if you are unsure of what to do to help your bees, make it over winter raise it as a question at our next meeting.

Missing Club Equipment

It is disappointing that we are still missing one of the Club's nuc boxes. It has not yet been returned to Phil Geeves. If the person who is still holding the box can contact Phil Geeves he will personally come around and collect it.

Also the wax embedder has not been returned back to Noela and has been out on loan for several months. Could the person please contact Noela.

We respectfully request that all Club equipment is returned promptly. At this point we operate on trust and members do not need to sign for loan equipment or Nucs. We would like to continue as is, but we do need members to play by the rules. Phil & Noela's contact details are on the last page of this newsletter.

Ipswich Show

The Ipswich Show is on this year from the 19th to the 21st May. The show is an important showcase for our club. As our local show we are again taking a stall to promote our club and honey. This show is the main fund raising activity for our club and goes to help pay for the club insurance and general running costs. The show involves a great deal of work and our stall needs to be staffed throughout the event. A roster for the 3 days will be organised at the May meeting.

Show Entries

The first show for 2017 will be Marburg on the 12th & 13th May. Members that want entries to be taken on their behalf need to get them to Phil Geeves on Thursday 11th May before 12 noon. Remember to have your completed entry forms. If you prefer you can lodge your own entries at the show. Entries will be accepted on Thursday night the 11th May at 7.30pm at the Steinhardt Pavilion. Entry forms and schedule can be found at www.marburgshow.com.au

Bio Security Registration

Like me, some of you may be a little confused by recent correspondence relating to bio-security. If you haven't yet received it, it is on its way to all registered beekeepers from the Queensland Government.

From 1 July 2016, if you keep one or more bee-hives you must register as a biosecurity entity. This replaces the previous requirement to be a registered beekeeper

Registration is a tool for tracing investigations in the event of a pest or disease incursion.

You are required to adhere to rules intended to:

- control and prevent diseases and pests affecting bees
- support good breeding.

If you keep bees only for non-commercial purposes (ie. a hobbyist) you will be exempt from paying the registration fee from 1 July 2016.

It is important as a beekeeper that you are familiar with your legal (and, for that matter moral) obligations as a beekeeper. Most of you will already have a copy of the new legislation, but if not, there is a copy of the manual on our website also information can be found at the links below.

First Flow

Thought members might like to see my first ever harvest of honey from 1 of the 6 frames in my Flow super. Was so easy and clean and I didn't need to suit up and the bees weren't disturbed at all. Also I have been meaning to tell a committee member how I like the new procedure of members writing questions on paper so they can be answered during meetings.

Stealing Bees - The new buzz in New Zealand's underworld as honey prices soar

New Zealand's bees are being stolen and traded by organised crime syndicates seeking to profit from skyrocketing honey prices thanks to surging demand in China, police and beekeepers say.

"It doesn't matter if it's beekeeping or meth, this is just the new gold rush," Laurence Burkin, apiarist manager at The True Honey Co in Dannevirke, north of Wellington, and himself a victim of hive thefts, said.

Beehive heists are rising, with 400 bee or honey thefts reported in the six months to January, New Zealand Police said, without providing figures for previous periods.

"There is nothing to suggest at this stage that beehive/honey theft is directly linked with a particular gang, but we do believe this offending is organised and likely being carried out by groups," said Senior Sergeant Alasdair MacMillan.

The crime spree comes while New Zealand's honey industry is booming.

Exports jumped 35 per cent to NZ$315 million ($A289 million) in the year to June according to the Ministry of Primary Industry, with about a third of that sold to mainland China and Hong Kong.

Apiarists said soaring prices for native Manuka honey, which official figures show has tripled in value since 2012, is driving the rise in bee-related crime.

A native product prized for its antibacterial properties as much as the taste, Manuka honey fetches as much as NZ$148 ($135) per kilogram, government figures show, with a hive worth as much as NZ$2,000 ($1,390.00).

Mr Robertson said he recently spent NZ$5,000 boosting security, after finding one or two of his 3,000 hives were being stolen weekly.

Police are now working with Apiculture New Zealand and the MPI to improve investigative techniques and to develop a database for tracking hive movements around the country.

"We were actually ignorant about bees because you think, bees, they're just hanging around the garden," Sgt MacMillan told television network TVNZ.

"I have learnt so much over the last 18 months, just the makeup of hives themselves is amazing."

Medical grade Australian honey

The world has a new source of antibacterial honey, with research confirming that Australian honey from the same species as New Zealand's well-known manuka honey has similar medicinal properties.

This is a potential boon for the Australian industry, as medical-grade honey sourced from New Zealand earns an estimated $75 million a year.

Praised for its antibacterial and healing qualities, medical-grade honey — sourced from Leptospermum plants — is being increasingly used as an effective treatment for wounds and skin infections, and can kill new 'superbugs' that are building immunity to conventional antibiotics.

The research has been carried out by three institutes at the University of Technology Sydney (UTS) under the Honey Bee & Pollination R&D Program, which is funded by Rural Industries Research and Development Corporation (RIRDC) and Horticulture Innovation Australia, with additional funding from Capilano Honey Ltd and Comvita Ltd.

Honey Bee & Pollination R&D Program spokesperson Michael Hornitzky said the findings are a game-changer for Australia's beekeeping sector, which could see the demand and value of Australian honey increase significantly.
